Fordham University, 113 West 60 Street, Dean's Conference Room 821

Welcome: John J. Cecero, SJ, PhD, Director, Center for Spirituality and Mental Health

Mohammad Usmani, President, Fordham Science Club

Workshop leaders:

Father Richard D. Hunt, SJ, is the Director of Catholic Campus Ministry at RIT: Rochester Institute of Technology. He will discuss the formation of a branch of mental health known as energy psychology, which consists of psychologically oriented therapeutic strategies that incorporate various forms of vibrational energetic influences, and utilize the Chinese Qi Gong medicine's meridian system, Indian Aurvedic medicine's chakra system, as well as the areas that surround the body called biofields. These bioenergetic fields in and around the body are invisible, nonphysical electromagnetic patterns in space binding energetically encoded information into a cohesive arrangement that affects human behavior, emotions and experience. On the theoretical side, energy psychology is heavily influenced by quantum physics, and the new biology. Energy psychology not only includes the important elements of establishing rapport with clients, setting goals and talking as practiced in traditional therapies, it also takes into account the energy of the client's words, thoughts, and beliefs and their impact on the flow of the body-mind-spirit-energy field. In practice, it is not uncommon that as psychological problems are resolved by removing blocks in the field, physical healing occurs as well.

Edmund L. Gergerian, MD, is Chief of Psychiatry at SIDDSO: Staten Island Developmental Disabilities Services Office. He will present the Universal Calibration Lattice® (UCL), an evolving system within our energy anatomy, that connects each of us to the unlimited universal energy source (Cosmic Lattice). The energy pattern of the UCL is universal; its form and structure are basically the same for each individual human. Its primary purpose is to hold the greater electrical charge available to us. Human consciousness is evolving and that evolution is reflected within our energy anatomy. Peggy Phoenix Dubro originated and developed the EMF Balancing Technique® designed to work with the Universal Calibration Lattice® to enhance and accelerate the evolutionary process. The technique utilizes the human-to-human effect upon the electromagnetic field, and is a simple, systematic procedure that anyone can learn. Dr. Gergerian will review the 13 Phases of the EMF Balancing Technique® and discuss its various clinical applications where spirit meets biology.

All are welcome. Refreshments are served.
